

What's wrong with Conceptual Theories?

- They doesn't always connect with the real world; they are a theory of some idealization, like a western boundary in a square ocean.
- For many problems, theory does a worse job of describing, and providing a basis for understanding, a phenomenon than does a direct simulation.
 - Polewards transport of heat in the atmosphere. Turbulence in general.

Consequence

- Theory is often ignored by modellers